

Tenure Track Assistant Professor
Department of Statistics
Oklahoma State University
Beginning August 2010

The Department of Statistics at Oklahoma State University (OSU) invites applications for a tenure track Assistant Professor. Requirements for this position include a Ph. D. in statistics or biostatistics, excellent teaching skills and outstanding research or evident potential. Grant success or potential for, is highly regarded. Current need areas of the Department include statistical theory and inference, probability and modeling and innovative applications, but all strong candidates are urged to apply.

The Head and faculty of the Statistics Department at OSU are committed to major development and growth in the coming years. The Statistics Department has a long tradition of excellent applications oriented programs and maintains continuing ties with OSU College of Agriculture and Natural Resources and the Oklahoma Agricultural Experiment Station that can afford our graduate students opportunities for practical training. The department offers degrees leading to the B.S., M.S., and Ph.D. in statistics.

OSU is Oklahoma's land grant university and houses the only statistics department in the State of Oklahoma. The University is experiencing major development, thanks to recent generous donations and endowments by many of its alums and or benefactors. The University enrolls about 23,000 students, over 5000 of them are pursuing graduate or professional degrees.

Stillwater, a great place to live and raise a family, is located in north-central Oklahoma about 60 miles from both Oklahoma City and Tulsa. The town enjoys four season weather, affordable housing, excellent schools and health care facilities, and reasonable cost of living.
